

equipment and accessories

THE EYES HAVE IT

If you don't need reading glasses by now, you will someday. And if vanity is an issue on the golf course, Callaway's stainless-steel frame, rimless glasses make it easy to write your score on the card and flip them away before anyone notices. Even better, the hinged temples telescope out from the closed position. It's an engineering marvel with polycarbonate lenses in four reading powers, all in a case about the size of a cigarette lighter. The online price is $50. Visit www.callawayeyewear.com.

HEADS OR TAILS? BOTH!

You can't just have a headcover that's a knitted sock with a number anymore. The newest twist with Daphne's Headcovers is taking what starts out as a plush animal but then splits in half, with the head for your driver and tail for a fairway wood. Pick from a pink pig, gray hippo, brown fox or husky dog. No Beanie Babies were harmed in the making of these novelties, which retail for $25 at Roger Dunn Golf Shops, Golfsmith and Sport Chalet. To see all of the animals in Daphne's zoo, visit www.daphnesheadcovers.com.

HOLD ON TO YOUR CLUBS

A golf bag doesn't take into account the laws of gravity. We know 90 percent of the weight is gathered at the top, but we still grumble when the bag keeps falling over in the garage. Get a hold of yourself: A $20 Hold-N-One device mounts on the wall and grabs your bag with a spring-loaded latch. No more tripping over it, and think how much space you'll save with this device, which stores your bag in less than a square foot. It's closet-friendly, too. Take a look at www.hold-n-one.com.

— ERIC TRACY